With the courts in many jurisdictions subject to the vagaries of the coronavirus-induced State shutdowns, the flexibility of arbitration is making it an increasingly popular choice for parties to commercial contracts. But can arbitration really provide an effective solution to the problems that parties to litigation face in the here and now?

Gordon Nardell QC

Gordon handles international arbitration and cross-border litigation as Counsel and arbitrator. He is also known for his EU and international dispute work in regulated markets. He is a Fellow of the Chartered Institute of Arbitrators, an accredited mediator and a member of the EU-List of the Dutch Brussels Bar. Read his online bio.

Angharad Parry

Angharad specialises in advisory and advocacy work in a wide range of commercial and private international law disputes concerning litigation and arbitration (both domestic and international). She has expertise in topical matters relating to international trade and commercial work, including export bans, frustration and force majeure arguments arising out of volatile political situations, and sanctions issues.
